About FGV and EBAPE:

Founded in 1944, Fundação Getulio Vargas (FGV) is a world-renowned center for high-quality education and research in Brazil. It hosts 8 schools and 2 research institutes. The Brazilian School of Public and Business Administration (EBAPE) was established in 1952 in Rio de Janeiro. EBAPE offers undergraduate and graduate programs. The MSc & PhD programs are offered in English.

Under the direction of Dean Flávio Vasconcelos, EBAPE has become the Brazilian port of entry for prominent scholars who wish to conduct cutting-edge research in business and public administration. The school has been successful at recruiting research-oriented junior and senior faculty from leading schools around the globe. The most recent examples are:

- 2011- Carlos Pereira (Michigan State University)
- 2012 - Eduardo B. Andrade (UC Berkeley)
- 2013 - Cesar Zucco Jr. (Rutgers University)
- 2013 - Daniela Campello (Princeton University)
- 2014 - Fábio Caldieraro (University of Washington)
- 2015 - Lars Norden (RSM, Erasmus University)

EBAPE expects to continue this hiring trend in the following years.
